Heather Jarnes and Ceri Myers give each other a quick hug before they depart to Fort Flagler.

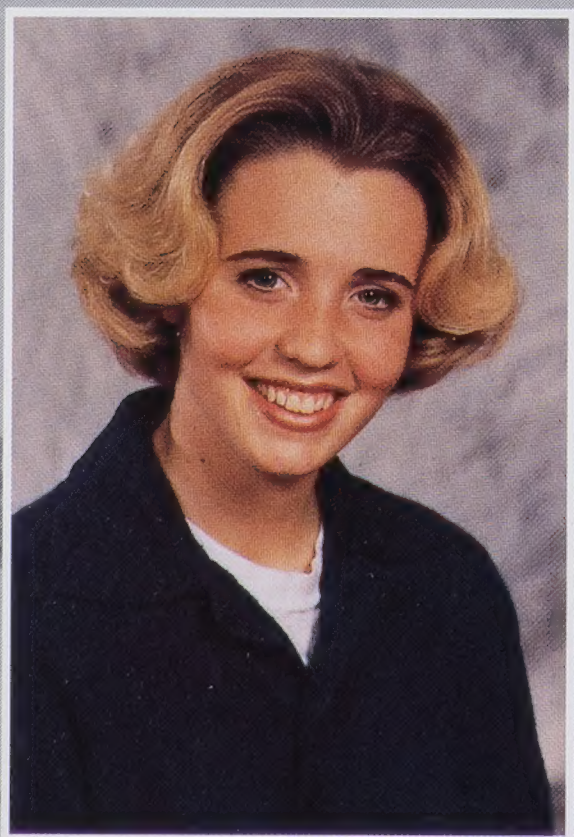

Seniors

We have waited for this year all our lives, then it seemed so far away, but now it's finally upon us. It's been said that your senior year goes by in a flash, but the memories you make last forever. Some things we will have to remember are Senior Trip, Fort Flagler, Senior Recognition and Graduation.

We asked a couple people to name a few qualities our class has. Angie Collver said, "The class of 1998 is a special group of unique people, but it seems like we are bonded close together. I think that one reason we are so close is because so many people have been here since [our] freshman year. A lot of exciting moments and memories are made in three years." Staci Luce thinks that, "This class is made up of such friendly people, accepting of others, and making newcomers, like me, feel at home."

We will never forget our senior year, the friendships we have made, and the memories shared will last a lifetime.

4-Year Seniors

Trips, vespers, and many fun times—our class has done so much. There are those of us who have been around to see it all. We've had a class from almost every teacher, attended over 100 chapels (at least most of us have . . .) and eaten every meal the cafeteria has ever served. We are the 4-Year Seniors.

Auburn Adventist Academy has matured and strengthened us, forever making an impression on our lives. We are the pioneers for our class. Ashley Johnson says, "We have stuck through everything the longest." Through many weeks of prayer, parties and conversations, we have learned more about ourselves, others and our God. Even when we were freshmen, we had a lot of spirit and put our whole hearts into participating in the games against the seniors. (We even out-screamed them a couple of times!) When we took a step up and became sophomores, we surprised and entertained everyone with an excellent, audience-involved class vespers. Last year, as juniors, we blew the seniors away with an awesome "Welcome Home" party, which included the handcuffing of the senior class president and a custom mug book. Our class has continued a tradition of excellence throughout our four years here.

We have so many memories from AAA. Jason Schrader remembers when Mr. Worley gave all the freshmen in the dorm ice cream! Different things stand out in each of our minds. "The first thing I think of is Zack and Jack," Patrick Phelps laughs. Our memories will be treasured by each of us and will last us a lifetime. We've also left our mark on our school. "We are the leaders!" Angie Collver exclaims. "I've seen a lot of changes in everyone," Cathy Shannon thoughtfully replies. It's true. We have grown not only physically, but also mentally. We are ready to conquer the world. We are prepared to move on. Thank you Auburn Adventist Academy for setting our feet on the right path.

Juniors

Upperclassmen! It says it all! That is what we as juniors thought throughout the year. So many new exciting things to do and so many new responsibilities. Diana Westdyk put it perfectly when she said "That we are very open minded and ready for anything that comes our way."

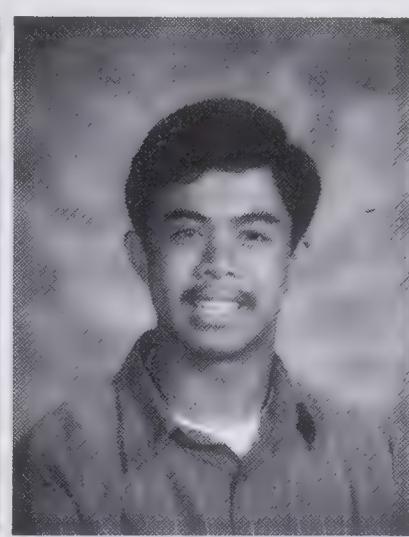

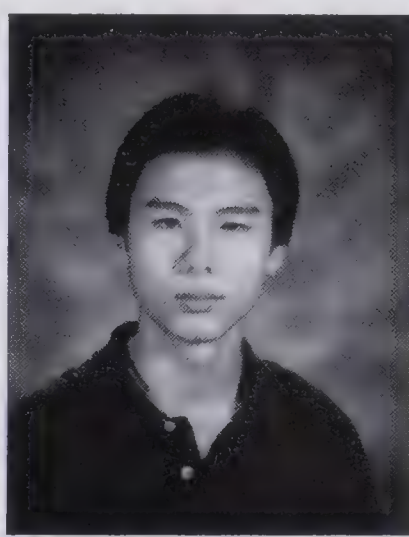

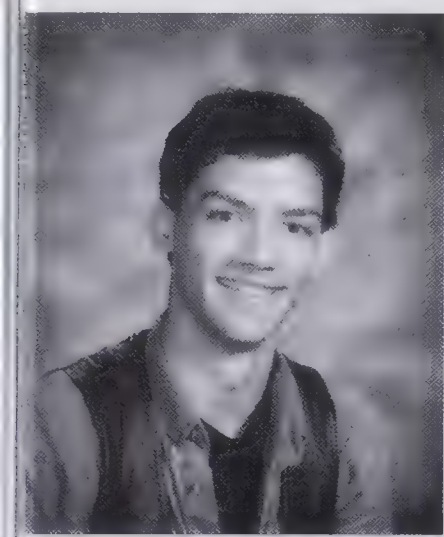

That is very true when there were so many things to plan and get ready for, like welcoming back the seniors and the big one, Junior Senior Banquet. Our class has grown a lot through the years. "One of the qualities that I like is that we are all spiritually motivated," exclaims Sarah Parker.

And that has been proven to be very true. With Treye McKinney leading out as our Spiritual Vice-President this year, it has been the most God centered year that I have ever seen. As we reach towards our senior year, I'm sure we will look back on this year as a year of not only grow-

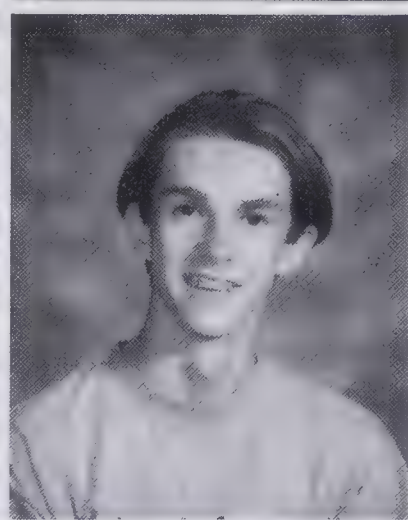

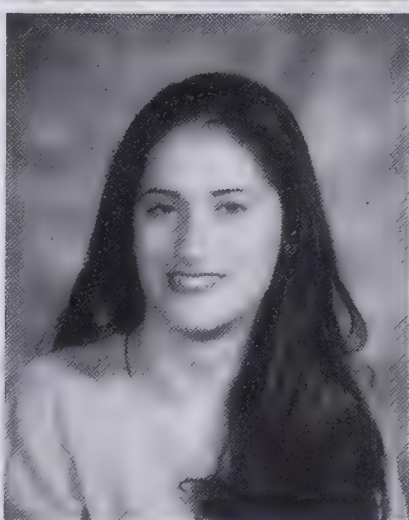

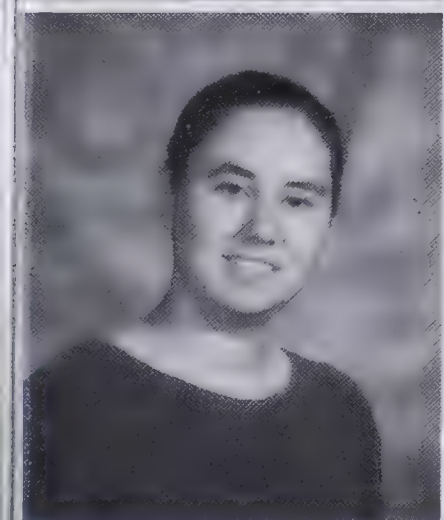

Sleeping in class can be easy sometimes. Rodney Baladad certainly demonstrates that well.

Sophomores

Jason Neumann and Bryan Fletcher are estatic to see each other on the first day of school.

Our Freshman year is finally over. We don't have to worry about Freshmen P.E, and making new friends at the "big scary academy." Most of us have found our niché with our friends, studies, and in other aspects of high school life.

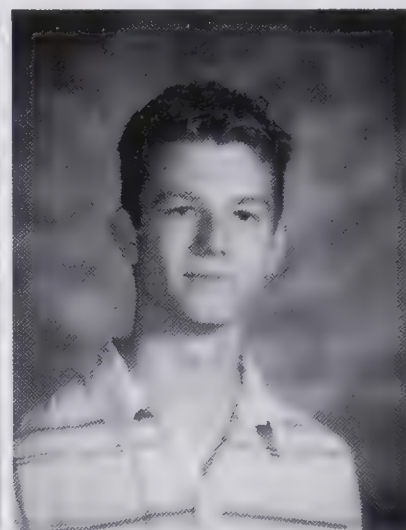

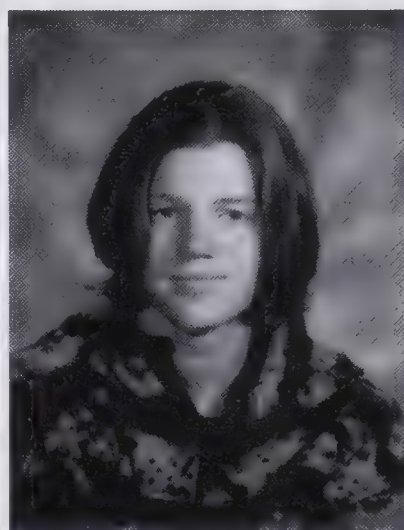

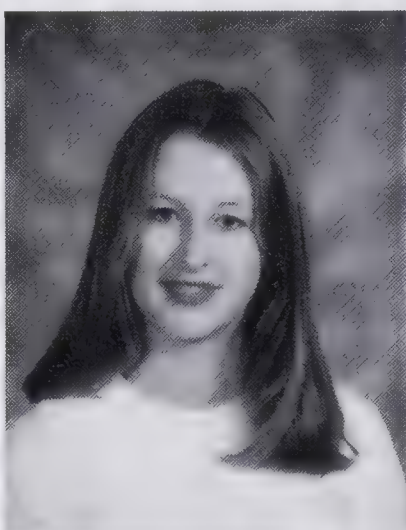

The Sophomore year isn't pure bliss, though. We have to learn how to endure first period classes starting at 6:55 AM (can we say Biology???), compared to sixth period which starts at 11:00 AM. We also still have to deal with being underclassmen, and not being able to go to the Junior/Senior Banquet, but those will be the best years of our lives, and they are worth waiting for.

The Sophomore class as a whole has also found their niché in things here on campus. We are a huge class. The school has to acknowledge our presence now, and we are doing a great job of showing what we've got. The Sophomore class has great athletic, academic, and leadership potential. The class officers are doing a great job this year, and are really taking this class somewhere!

Freshmen

The Class of 2001 is more widely known as the Freshman Class. They come on campus at the beginning of each year wide eyed and wondering. For some, it's easier to adjust than others, especially when you know students attending the academy already. But when you walk on campus not knowing a soul it can be very overwhelming.

Shy is a word to describe the majority of this class at the beginning of the year. But as things get more active, so do they. You may think they don't have a lot of spirit compared to the other classes, but they do. As one freshmen puts it, they just want to have fun and see if they can out do the seniors.

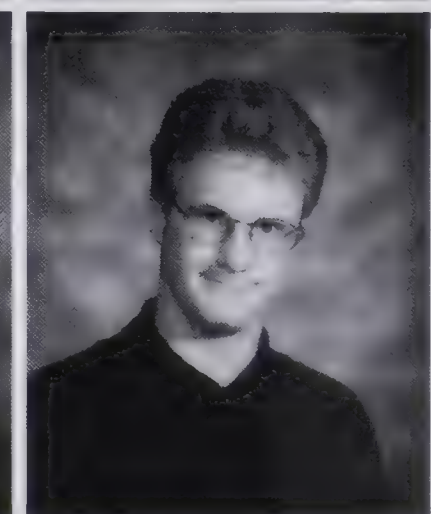

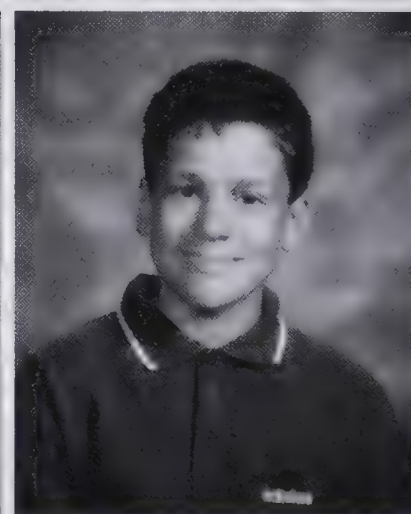

To most, it would seem like the seniors would be intimidating to this class but that's not the way they look at it. A lot of freshmen have close friends in the upper class and look up to those with positive accomplishments. Even though they get "dissed" a lot, the Freshman Class are defiantly strong survivors.

Faculty

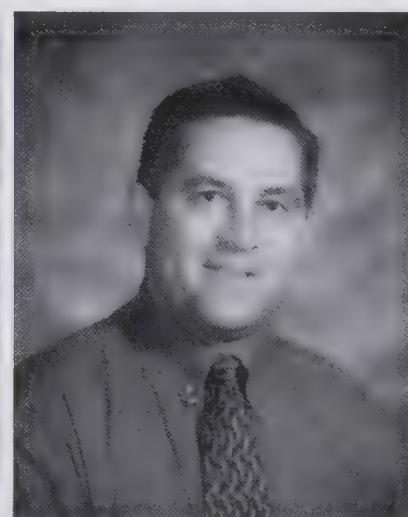

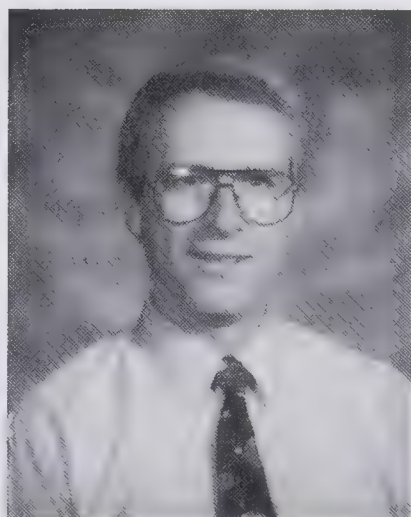

This year the Faculty have really helped us to live and grow in life. They are not only our teachers in the class room to teach us stuff like algebra formulas, but also how to get to know God more. They have also been there when we need them. As Mr. Allen put it "The Faculty at Auburn are a breath of fresh air in the smog of life." It is nice to have good Faculty here at Auburn.

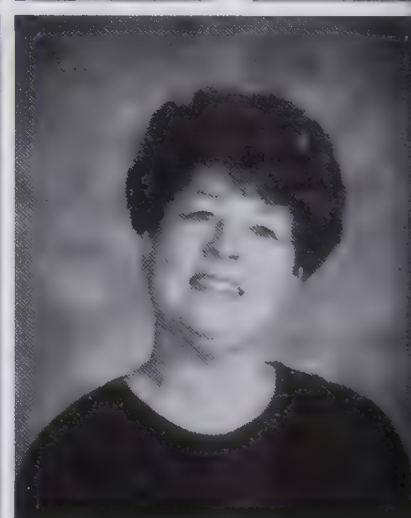

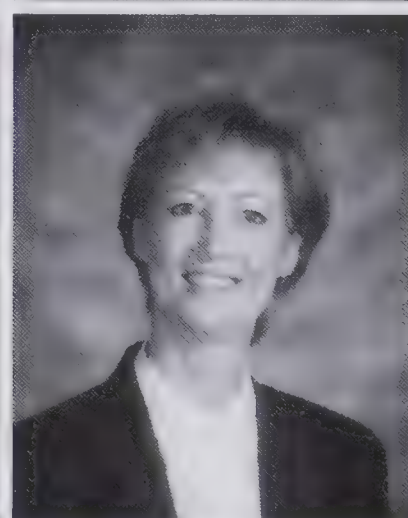

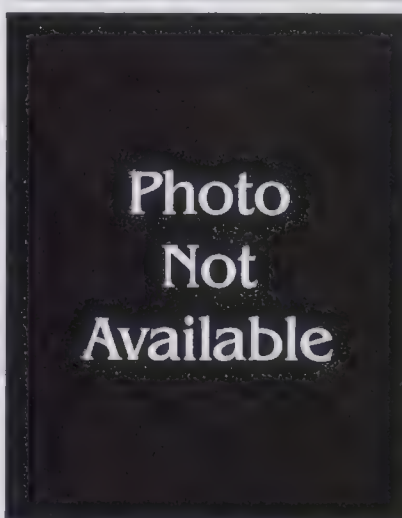

Tara Vinyard says that, "I appreciate the Faculty's devotion to christian education and their willingness to take time simply to talk." It seems to be the attitude on campus that people like the Faculty here. This seems normal to us, but in other school it isn't like this. The Faculty aren't as nice and generally don't care as much do to the fact that they see so many students they can't get to know them. Of course you may not like all of your teachers on campus. I seem though here at Auburn most people like there teachers anyway.

Organizations

What would our school be without organizations? Kind of dead, right? They provide the backbone of our activities, an outlet for organized creativity. Not all of the organizations are performance-oriented, some work in the background, while others keep tab on the pulse of student life. This is reflected in the numbers of participating students from more than seventy in concert choir to barely eight in Rainier Vista. Whether many or few, whether doing somersaults through the air, or pounding away on the timpani, each student gives his best. Body, mind, and soul are intricately blended to the glorification of God.

Brian Kim, editor of Rainier Vista, wonders whether all of the pieces of the puzzle will fall into place—pictures, captions, body copy—for the second (and worst I might add . . .) deadline.

ASB

Larry Wienke writes thank-you letters to all his good friends at AAA at the ASB Thanksgiving vespers.

The Associated Student Body Officers is an important group of people who plan events. They also act as a voice to tell the administration what the students want or how they feel on specific issues. Stefan Kaiser and Jamie Kraus plan many things that bring the students of Auburn together as a school. From the friendly competitions at the handshake to the marriage ceremonies that take place at the fall festival, ASB continues to spice up everyday life at AAA. Bryan Fletcher says that, "ASB this year has really made school an enjoyable place to be. Jaimie [Kraus's] creativity and Stefan [Kaiser's] leadership combine together to make this year's ASB the best ever." The ASB officers are probably the hardest working students on campus. They strive to make each event unusual and spectacular. Spirit week provided a much needed break from the everyday monotony students often encounter after Christmas break. Auburn students got involved with their classes by dressing up for clash day, seventies day, jock day, and impersonation day. Sarah Sharp says, "It was so fabulous to see everyone cheer their classmates on with such enormous spirit." ASB this past year has been outstanding. Their events have been well planned and original. All of the officers put everything they had into ASB and made this year truly memorable.

—Lauren Edwards

Heidi Nollan, Karisse Fiedler, Jamie Kraus, Melissa Webb and Renée Raley are excited about the soon to begin ASB handshake.

Casa Loma & Zeta Kappa

Casa Loma and Zeta Kappa are two organizations that help the campus in special ways. Very year, Casa Loma and Zeta Kappa alternate hosting the first banquet of the school year. This year it was Casa Loma's turn, and it surely was different. It had a country western theme. "I liked the casual feel of the banquet this year. It definitely made it easier on everybody," commented Maria Zeman. It is not an easy task for each organization to put on a banquet every other year.

Not only do the officers put on the banquet, but they also provide amenities for the respective "inhabitants" of the dorms.

Publications

Sometimes information is hard to get on campus. One group that tries to change that every year is The Direct Connections. The DC is a dedicated staff that shares news articles, stories, sports and a whole lot more to keep us informed on what is happening on campus. But it takes a lot of teamwork to publish this paper. Even Ted Swinyar says, "The biggest challenge is working with all the staff members to make the DC be as good as possible." Often they stay up until the wee hours of the morning to make the finishing touches.

The Rainier Vista staff exists to capture memories. Staff members work as hard as they can to bring you the best of the year. Leaders in the Making Auburn Adventist Academy is a wonderful place to go to school and learn about God. It has sports, music, spiritual activities, high standing academics, good teachers, and great students. All those things help make Auburn the awesome place it is, but the one major contributing factor to Auburn Academy's excellence is its ability to prepare its students for the future. What our future world needs is strong leaders. At Auburn Adventist Academy, we have many of them in training. Student Week of Prayer this year was a complete success. Jared Meharry's speech about where he's been and where we all need to go really hit home with the student body. The special thing about Week of Prayer is that our peers and friends get up in front of the Student Body to tell their own personal testimony. That takes courage, strength, and faith in God, which are three major qualities in strong leaders. Our Campus Ministries Department has its own set of leaders that plan Vespers, Church Services, Tuesday and Saturday options, weekend retreats, and even Weeks of Prayer. Auburn Adventist Academy has produced many fine leaders in the past, and will continue to give its students the opportunity to become great in the future.

—Sarah Bailey

This year's Student Week of Prayer speakers did a remarkable job bringing Jesus into the hearts of the students.

Tamara Tolf shows her ability to lead by sharing he 4-Year Senior knowledge with her fellow seniors, parents and friends at Senior Recognition.

Gymnastics

One of the many great advantages of going to Auburn is its gymnastics program. This program focuses more on the spiritual aspects of acrobatics than the physical. Before every practice, Mr. Goltz leads out in worship, and the team members take turns giving worship thoughts and having prayer. The team text is Phillipians 4:13, which says, "I can do all things through Christ, who strengthens me." Tamara Tolf, a four-year member of the team, and also the captain says, "The best part of being in gymnastics is the team unity, and the friendships that you build. You have to trust each other, and that gives you a common ground on which to build life long friendships." Though the focus is on using their talents for God, the physical aspect of the sport still remains. Twenty push-ups and twenty sit-ups after every practice keeps every team member in tip-top condition, not to mention the warm-ups before class. Mark McKown, a new team member this year, said, "Gymnastics has improved my coordination, and I can do things I only dreamed about before." Gymnastics, like any other sport, builds self-confidence and gives purpose to its participants. Canaan Rice would like to thank Auburn Academy for the chance to learn about God, make new friends and construct valuable memories through the varsity gymnastics program.

Academics

The academic program here at Auburn Academy has been held up above others by parents as well as students. We offer classes to keep challenging students' minds with honor courses and college credit classes through Walla Walla College. We also have classes to challenge a student's physical side, such as lifeguarding, gymnastics, and International Foods. Everyone has a favorite teacher. Someone who wishes to remain anonymous comments, "I think

Mr. Alvarez is cute. I love how he talks, and he has the cutest dimples." While Heather Phelps, who doesn't seem quite as enthusiastic, talks about why Mrs. Bahnsen is her favorite: "She seems a little more human . . . like the rest of us." Mindy Owen likes Bill Roberts because, "He allows us to discuss things and hear other people's opinions." "Auburn has so many great faculty members." Jeni Whitlock summed it up, "I think the teachers make class really interesting, and that makes students more willing to learn."

English

Peter Chiu prays silently as he takes his English test.

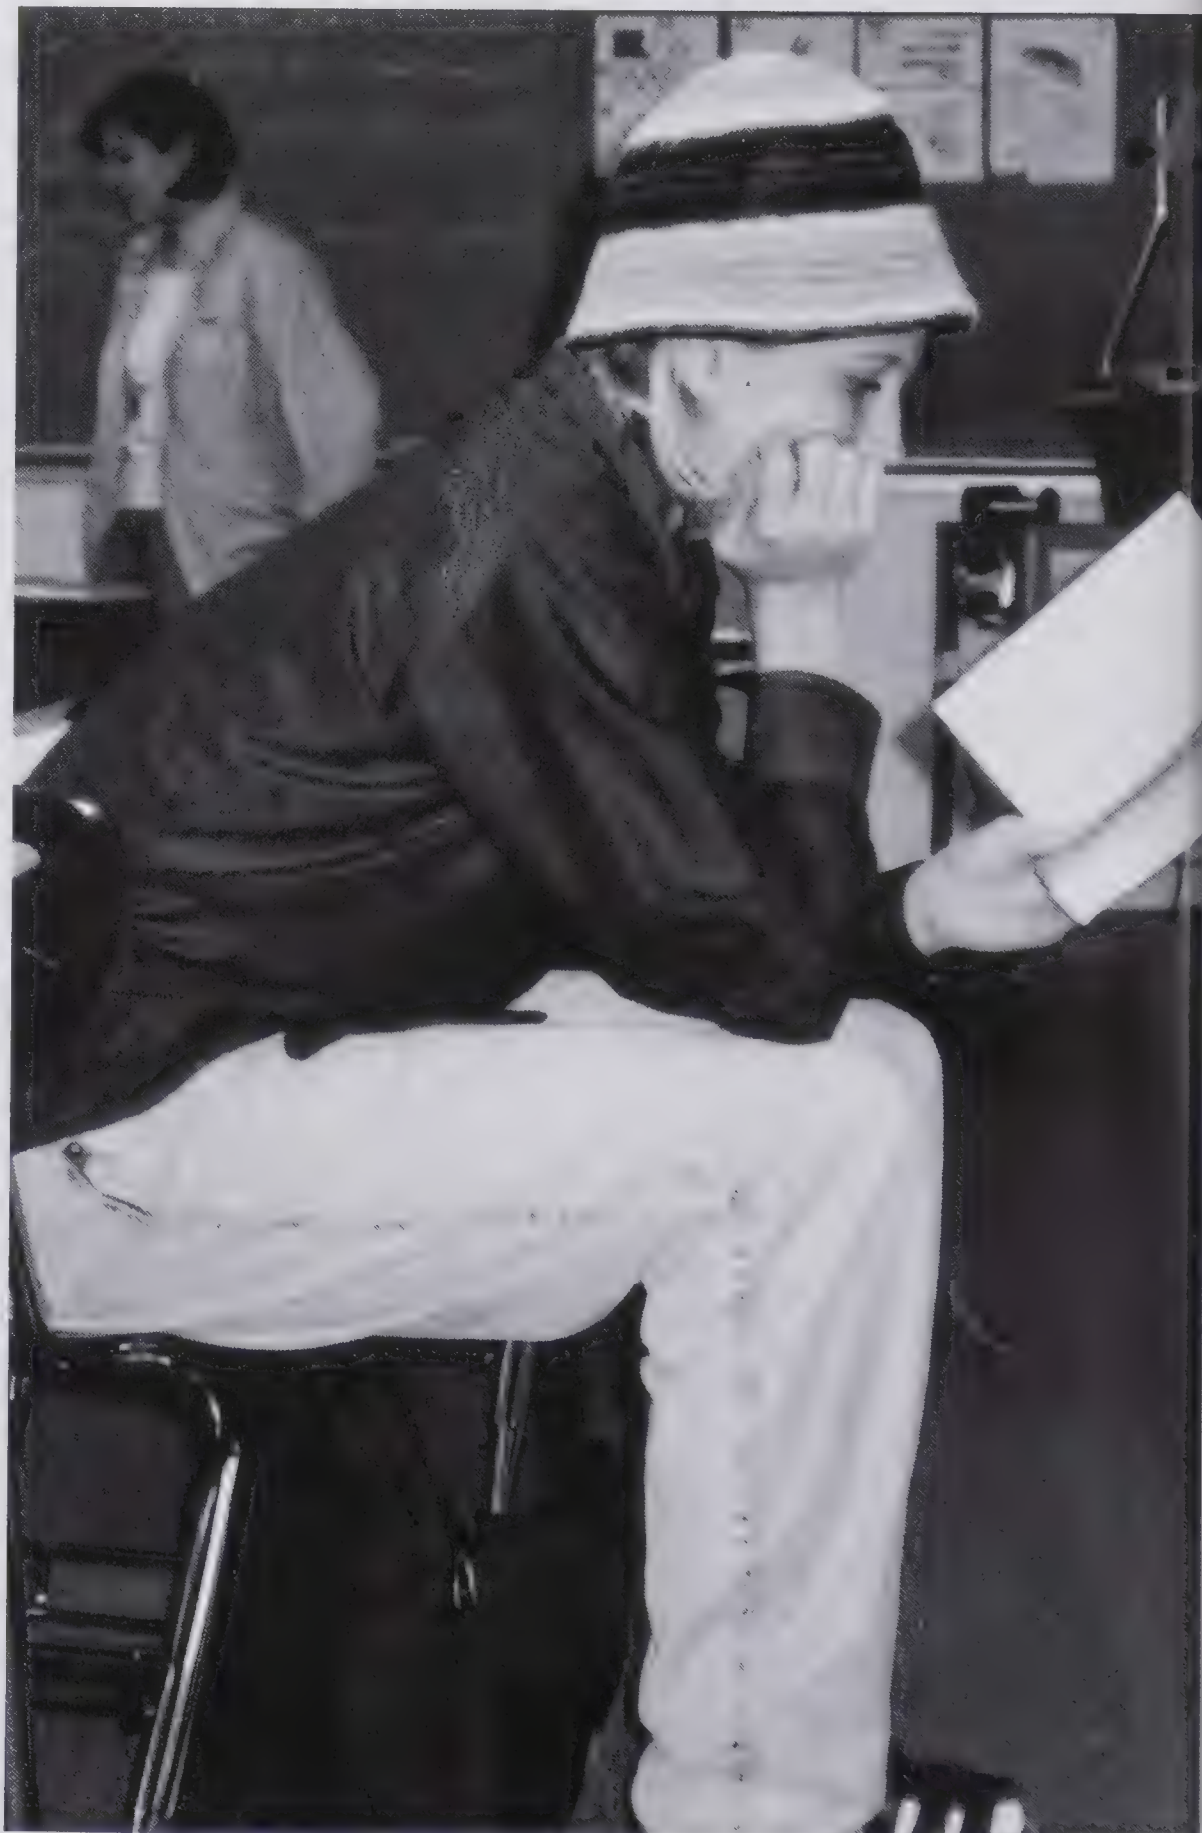

"I love all the English teachers so much. Every time I walk past the English Department I can feel the camaraderie," says Laura Gildersleeve. Mrs. Bahnsen, Mrs. Kobberstad and Mrs. Zbarschuk all get along well and it comes through in their classes. Everyone has a favorite English teacher. "I like Mrs. Kobberstad's teaching style because she does a lot of active projects," says Jennifer Wright. Pooh McCormick prefers Mrs. Zbarschuk. "I like Mrs. Zbarschuk's style because it's unique, and she makes English interesting for people like me who don't like English too much." "I like Mrs. Bahnsen because she is kinda crazy, and she's always herself," says a smiling Heather Phelps. Regardless of the teacher, the English classes have a common purpose: to enrich our minds through literature, and to help us understand and express ourselves better, whether it be through a two-word poem or an obituary.

—Sarah Sharp

Foreign Language

Kimberly Parker and Dana Hardesty are ever so intent on today's lesson in the usage of verbs.

Mr. Renan Serrano teaches Beginning and Advanced Spanish and French. Mr. Serrano gives learning a 2nd language a fun twist. These classes don't only practice speaking, writing and reading the language, they also learn about the cultures that speak them. The French classes can be found watching videos in French, and making Crêpes, while the Spanish classes play soccer and cook enchiladas. Bozz Fandrich's favorite thing about Spanish is "the interesting conversations we have with Renan. He teaches us more about life than Spanish which is good." Mr. Serrano is one of those teachers you can go to for advice as well as for homework. Tim Dunston enjoys his French class because of "Mr. Serrano's ability to teach things other than French." Mr. Serrano knows his stuff whether it's sports, languages, or life in general. Renan takes a special interest in his students and is respected by all.

Mr. Serrano tries again to explain his soccer strategy to his ever so patient class.

"I'll bet that nobody sports as chic a 'do' as I," claims Brandon Thompson.

Steve Cochran doesn't look too happy about being interrupted from his favorite class—Spanish I.

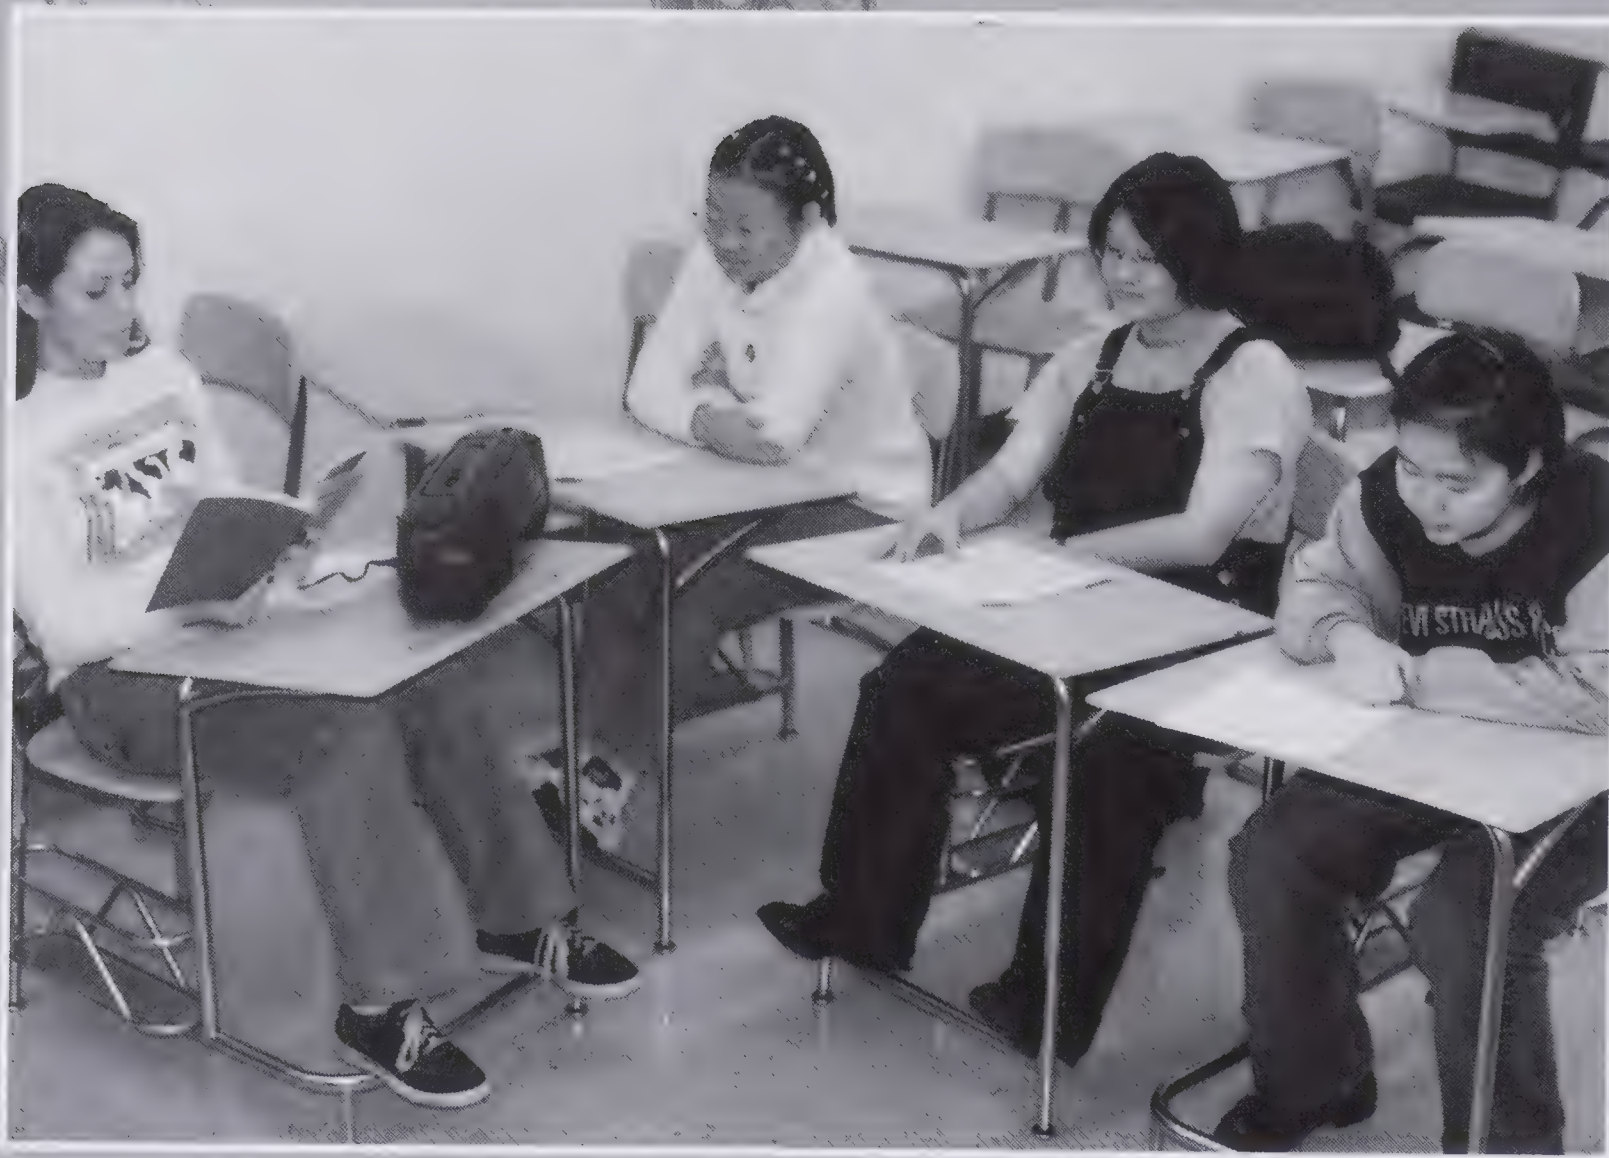

International Students

Sebastian Lee wonders if the railing will hold as he rests on a hike during the Sunset Lake Outing.

Auburn's international students come from various parts of the world. Japan, Korea, Russia, Thailand, and the Ukraine are just a few of the places they call home. Each individual adds to the diversity of faces on campus.

Many of them take ESL classes to improve their English skills. Passing the TOEFL test is a requirement to enter mainstream classes. After graduation, many plan to attend an American college or university.

History

History has always been a major part of academy life, from the Northwest History Tour to the retiring of Mr. Miller. Newsweeks and quizzes are a daily part of history classes, as well as Mr. Fackenthall's sense of humor and lively discussions. "[He] makes history jump off the pages of the textbook, rapturing us into the culture of that time," comments Chris Kellie. Let's not forget Mr. Knudsen's unique way of teaching history. "I like how [he] tries to involve the students as much as possible," says Jeremiah Hill.

Another great part about history at Auburn is the Northwest History Tour. Mr. Miller takes a bunch of kids each year around the Northwest, and they look at the different sites the settlers saw when they first arrived. They go to famous places like Ft. Vancouver, Multnomah Falls, and the Columbia River. One of the most exciting parts of the Northwest History Tour is the river rafting trip. Students go river rafting on the Salmon River. "It was a blast," Erin Persons exclaims.

—Rodney Baladad

Bible

Our religion classes are what separate our academic program here at Auburn Adventist Academy from public schools. Jesus is our aim and our goal. Our Bible classes help us understand Seventh-day Adventism more clearly. Religion courses are another way of witnessing to non-denominational students, and developing confidence in our beliefs.

There are a couple of new Bible teachers this year. Mr. Roberts came from a pastoring position in Monroe, WA. This is Mr. Roberts' first year teaching, and we are all so glad that his teaching career could begin at Auburn Adventist Academy. Mr. Davis came from Southern College in Collegedale, Tennessee. He also joined the Witzel Hall Staff as an assistant dean to Mr. Bale. Most of the Auburn Adventist Academy students agree that it's nice to be able to choose from a variety of teaching styles, from Mr. Koehn's jokes to Mr. Roberts' interesting mission stories. There is something for everyone in Bible class here at Auburn, whether it may be spiritual enlightenment or an easy "A".

—Sarah Sharp

Pastor Bill Roberts declares, "I'm in charge here!"

Jared DeMeerleer and Ryan Mattson work on their bible assignments.

Joel Mickelwait and Jeff Downs serenade the student body during chapel.

Daniel Klineburger sleeps through class.

Mr. Koehn tells his class about his Russian experience.

Math

Math is a subject some of us think we will never use, although a few people here at Auburn Adventis Academy would beg to differ. Math is useful in many aspects of life. Ask any chemist, engineer, or accountant. Construction is a field that uses math every day.

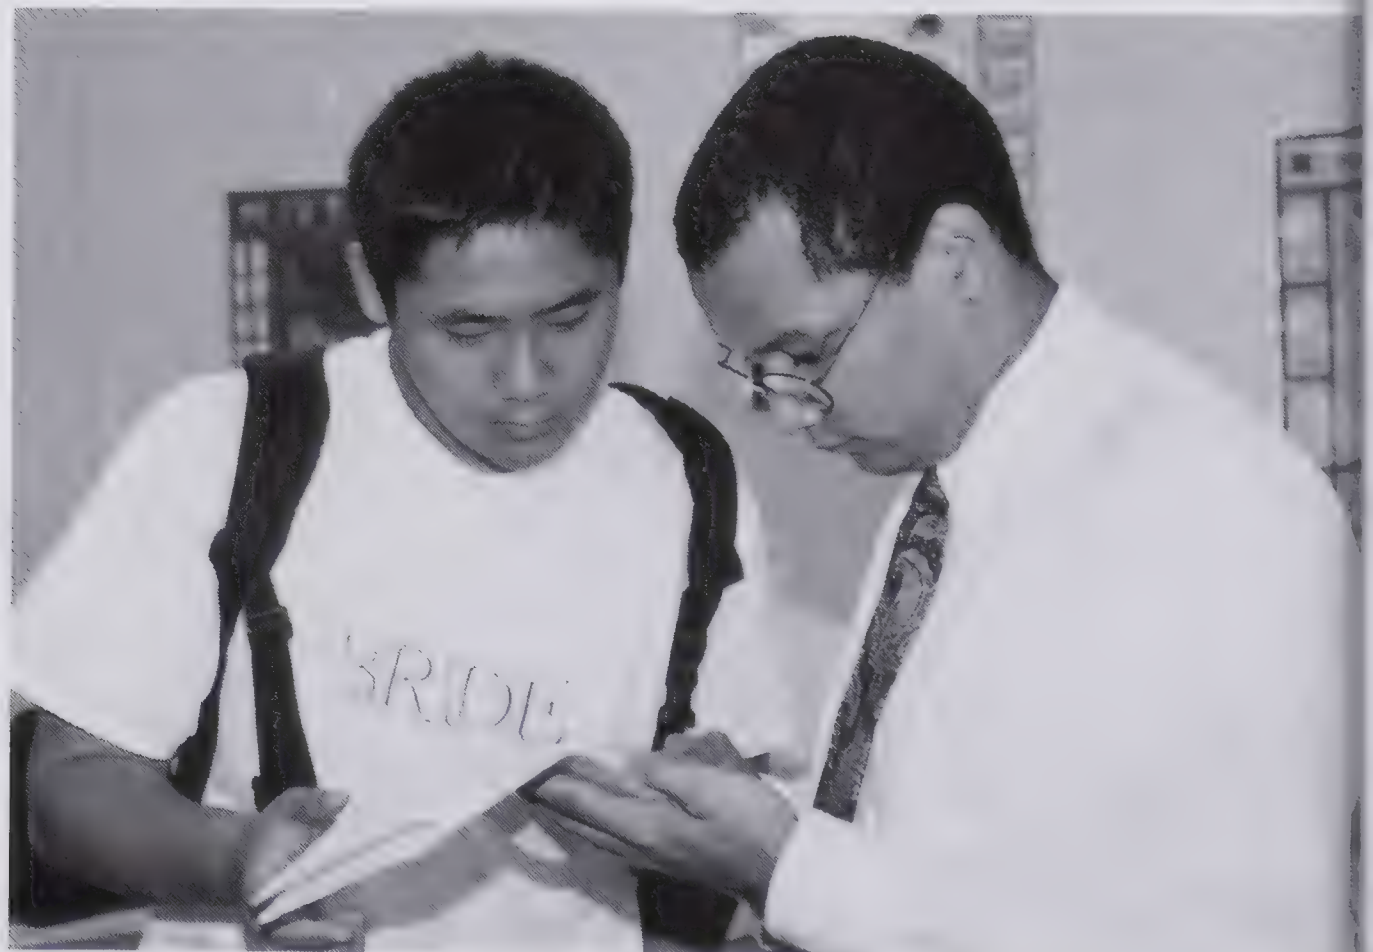

"Algebra II brings me to another level of logical thinking and in every problem I find further enlightenment," says Susie Worley. Math teaches students the art of logical thinking and problem solving and some students really enjoy that. These are all skills that all of us have to admit that we will need in life. Perhaps we should start paying attention in Algebra, Geometry, and Pre-Calculus. "Pre-Calculus is a very challenging class. That is . . . I love it!" smirks Brian Kim. At any rate, math is an extremely important part of our technological world that seems to grow faster than those mind-stretching equations we'd all rather copy out of the back of the book, although we never do. Right?

—Sarah Sharp

"C is for Calculus," says Mr. Alvarez to Derek Fletcher.

"Mr. Alvarez, I don't understand number five," says Peter Chiu.

Mr. Martinsen demonstrates a difficult problem to his class.

Laura Seibold and Heather Phelps open their geometry books for the first time and are awed by the concepts that they have to learn.

Tammie Petrie is baffled by the math problem, however, John Lee's seems to grasp the concept.

Science

Science classes include, chemistry, biology and anatomy and physiology, which are taught by Miss Toop. Physics, CADD (Computer Aided Drafting and Design), and engineering are taught by Mr. Allen. In your high school education you will be required to take at least one or two of these classes. Sophomores commonly take biology and learn about the exciting world of dissection. Misha Birmele said that his favorite thing about biology is, "All the projects; I find them very stimulating." As a Junior you might take chemistry and find yourself with more information than you could have possibly imagined about atoms and electrons. Rodney Baladad said, "My . . . favorite thing about chemistry is the labs. I really [love] those labs." Physics class outlines laws and theories of the physical world. anatomy and physiology is a class for students thinking of a career in the medical field. Sarah Bailey remarked, "I never knew Miss Toop was so funny. She was always cracking jokes in anatomy and physiology. It was lots of fun."

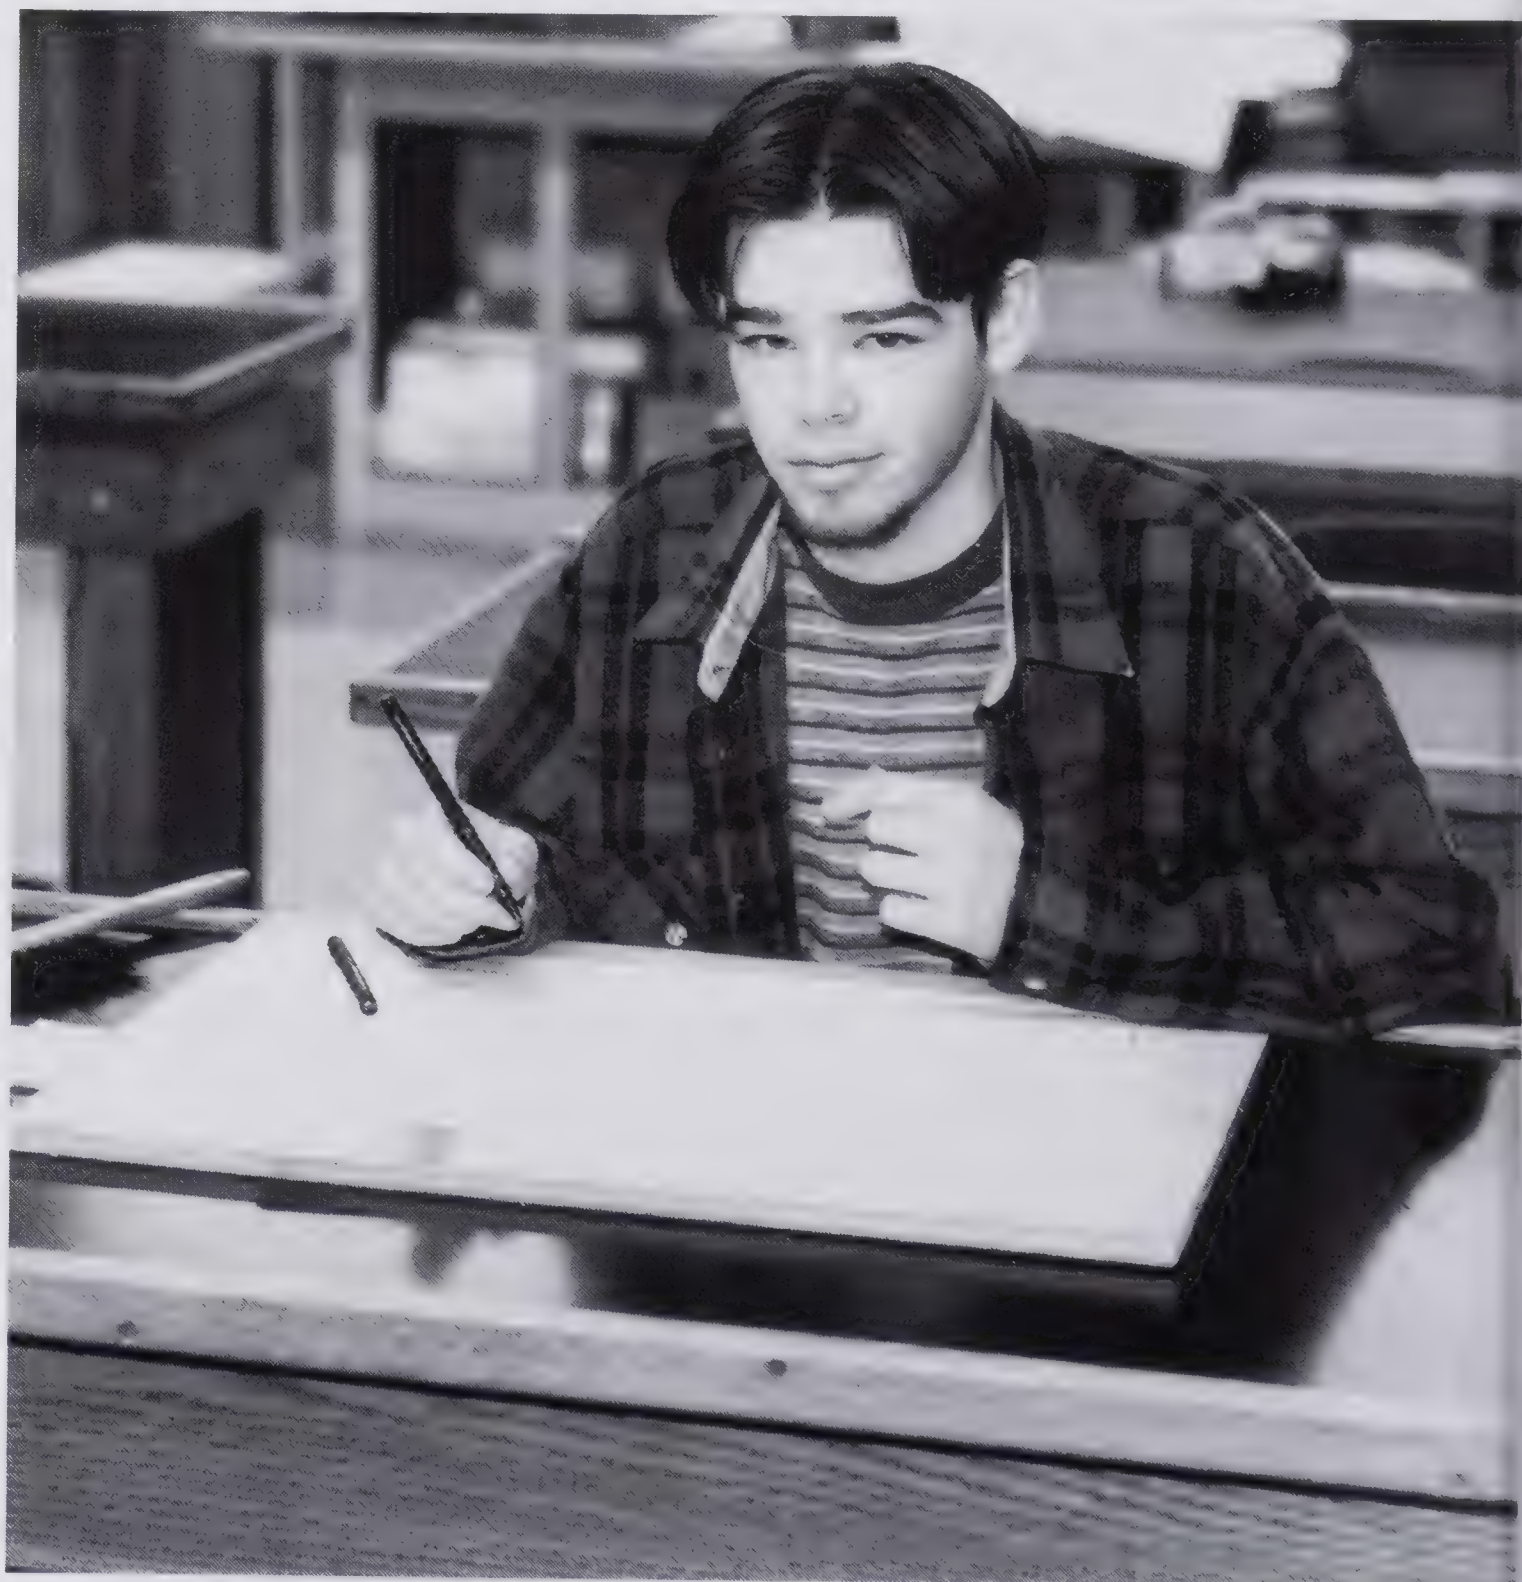

—Lauren Edwards

Bryan Bailey peers through the surveying equipment engineering

Raymond Valleau takes time out of his day to work on his drafting assignment.

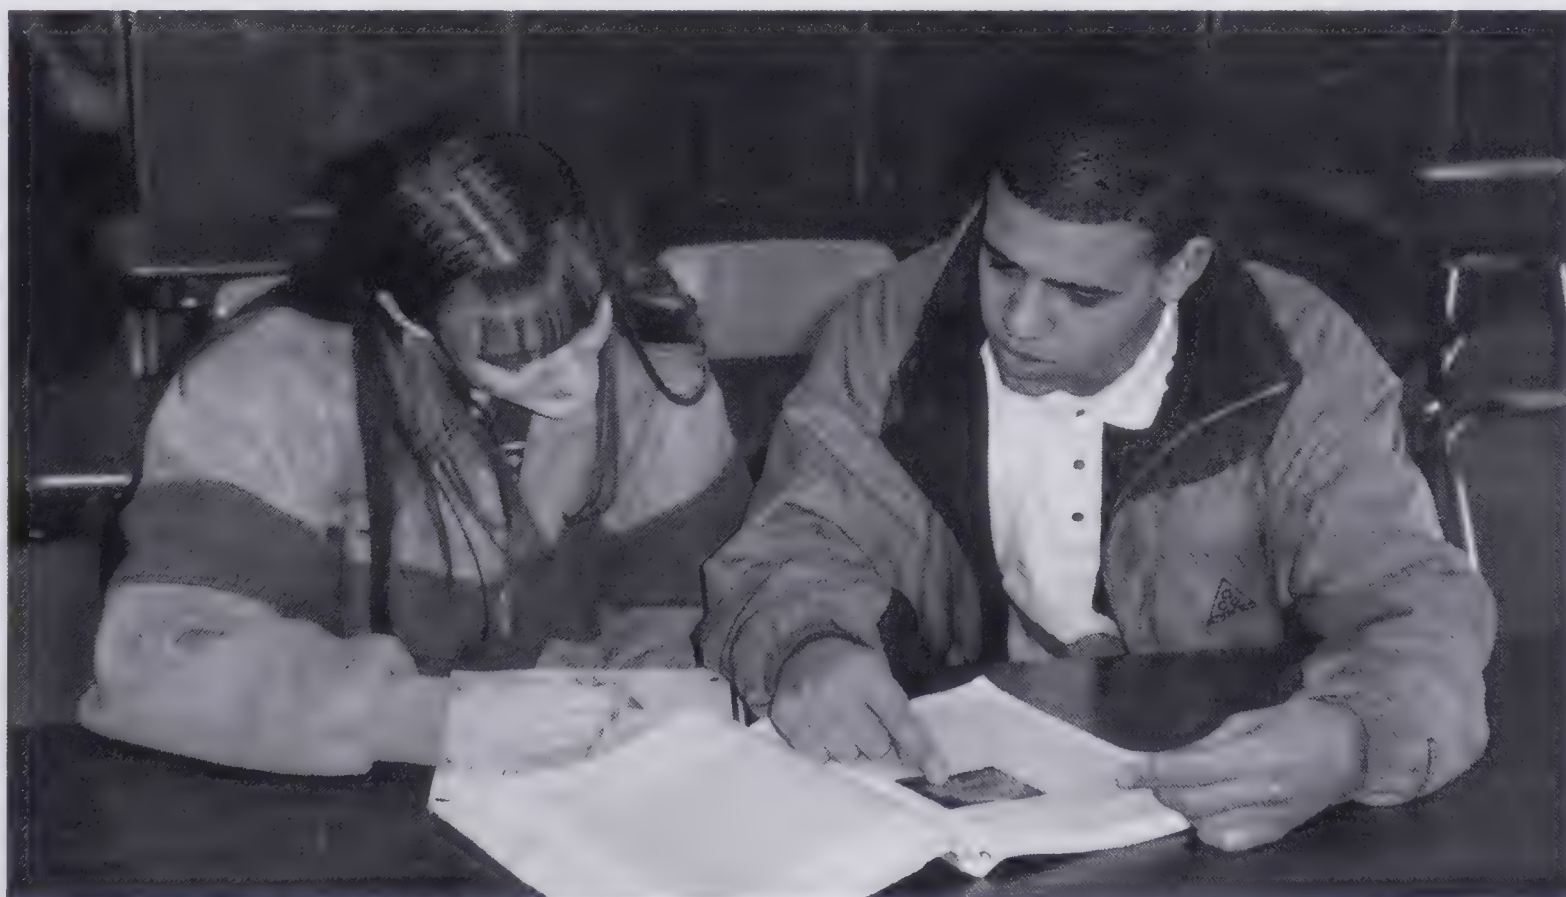

Bobby Chun's face lights up as he discovers that he is finally finished with his biology worksheet.

Jon Crosby explains the chemistry experiment to Chris Kellie.

"You're doing it all wrong," Angela Waymire says to brother Andy Waymire.

Practical Education

If you came to Auburn Adventist Academy as a freshman, you most likely took ELS-A and ELS-B. ELS-A is taught by Mrs. Kilgore, and in it you learn the basics of homemaking, including cooking and general family life knowledge. Daniel Klineburger reflects on ELS-A as a class that, "... Wasn't very fun to take at the time, but in retrospect I learned a lot of valuable information." In ELS-B Mr. Hyde teaches students everything they could ever possibly want to know about woodshop, as well as the basics of auto mechanics and metal working. Kyle Olsen says, "ELS-B is pretty easy; I love making things in woodshop, but even better than that is auto mech. That's the bombinator." But even if you missed out on ELS-A and B you could still take home ec. from Mrs. Kilgore and woodshop from Mr. Hyde. Marc Pulley, a senior in woodshop, says that, "It makes me feel good when I can create something special out of a plain old block of wood." The skills learned in practical living will benefit everyone who took these classes for many years.

—Lauren Edwards

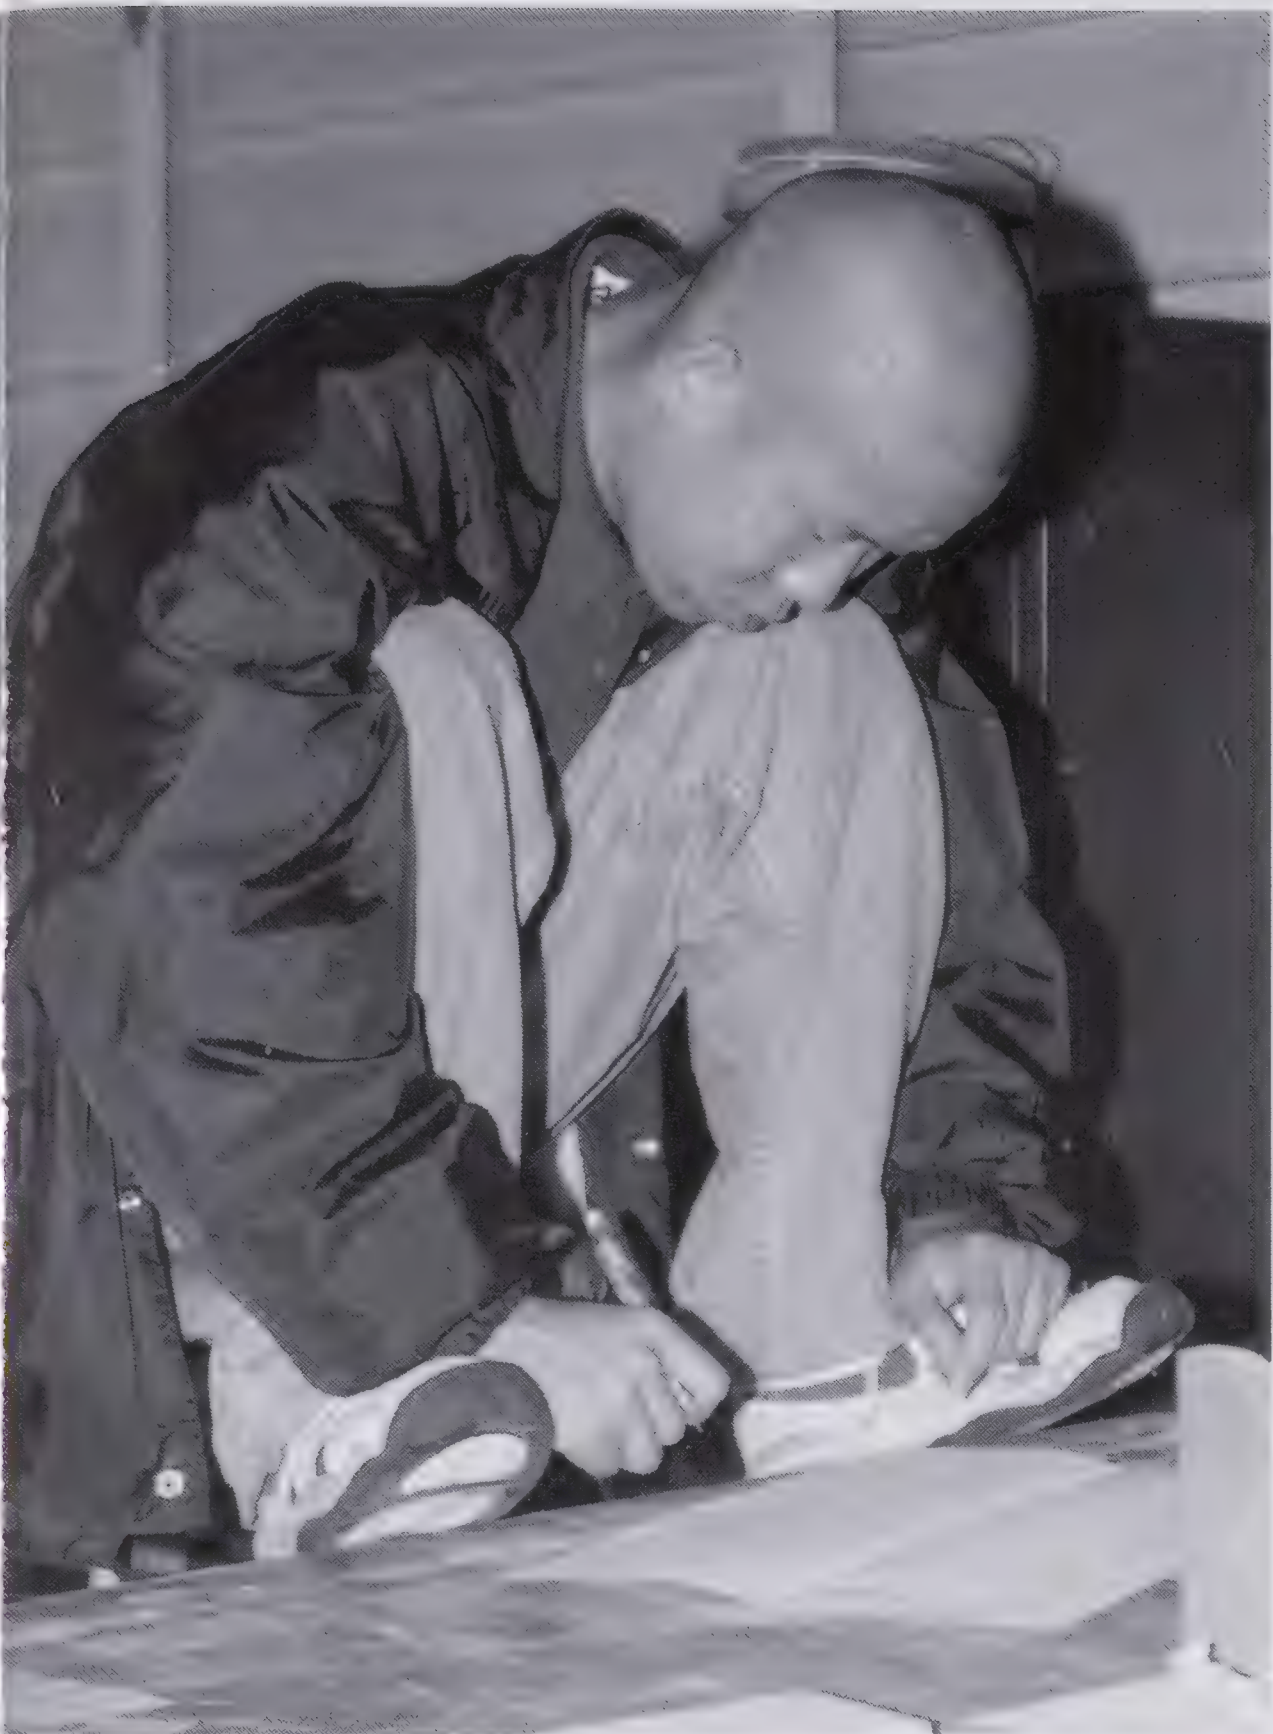

Todd Holbrook takes a break to rest his arm from the strenuous hand saw.

Cheri Allen seems to be a little confused during International Foods.

Brendon Smith has finished his aircraft and is getting ready to see if it will fly.

Jae-Ung Sim concentrates on choosing his next project for woodshop.

Ryan McKown makes a delicious burrito in International Foods.

Mrs. Kilgore cooks up a crêpe with Nutella® on Registration Day.

Clay Radke painstakingly measures his joint puzzle so everything will fit perfectly.

Fine Arts

What do you think of when you hear the words "Fine Arts?" Voice lessons is one thing that you might think about. Mr. Neumann and Mrs. Vale work with each student to improve the voice. "Mrs. Vale is a talented and awesome teacher; she helps us learn and understand other languages and pulls out the stories that are told in the music," comments Shawna Bailey. Then there are instrumental lessons taught by Mr. Dennis. Mrs. Miller teaches piano and organ. Jeremiah Hill says, "It's good learning experience." The skillful Mr. Schallig teaches patience with pencil and brush from calligraphy to oil painting. Photography is another way to capture reality or express different moods. All these classes provide opportunities for self expression.

—Rodney Baladad

Shawna Bailey focuses intensely on the intricacies of four sharps.

"How come . . . you are the only one in class today?" wonders Carol Gambs aloud. "I need the extra time for my complicated drawing," answers Jae-Ung Sim.

Business & Technology Education

As I walked into the computer lab at the beginning of the year, I noticed some improvements. Mr. McKey was there to tell me how to log on. We have gotten some new 200 MHz processors this year. So if you're lucky to get one, it will run much faster. We are also running Windows NT on our server. This year we got our own T-1 connection to the Internet.

Also this year, both labs got new software for the computers. We now have Corel Draw 7, Corel Word Perfect 8, Netscape Communicator and the new Microsoft Internet Explorer 4. All in all, this year the computers have gotten a lot of upgrades that will help the students in their lives at Auburn Academy.

—Daniel Klineburger

George Jorgenson completes another task for Mr. Willison.

P.E. & Health

Auburn Adventist Academy's physical education department is run by Bob Kilgore. He teaches basic P.E., advanced P.E., team sports and health. In addition to this, he is also the coach for the boys varsity basketball program and in charge of all intramural activities. Mr. Kilgore's basic P.E. class is one enjoyed by almost every freshman to enter Auburn. They don't only play games; they also learn how to be physically fit by watching videos, filling out worksheets and taking tests. Advanced P.E. is for those who came to Auburn after Freshman year, need P.E. credit and don't want to be in class with Freshmen. Maria Zeman's favorite thing about advanced P.E. is the exercise she gets in the class. Mr. Kilgore really knows how to work hard. Team Sports focus on specific sports, their rules, and strategic techniques. They move with the seasons, working on football during football season and volleyball during volleyball season. This class is good for the student who enjoys athletics, and wants to sharpen his or her skills and increase his or her knowledge of a sport. Health class is one that almost everyone has to take. Vladimir Temchuk says his favorite thing about health is, "learning about a healthy diet." Mr. Kilgore has his health classes watch numerous videos on the body and learn about how the body works as well as the effects of harmful substances. None of his classes are pushovers, and Mr. Kilgore expects a certain seriousness about the body and health while making learning fun. Mr. Kilgore's P.E. and Health department is a great asset to Auburn Academy.

—Sarah Bailey

Ever so patiently, Mr. Kilgore helps Tiffany Lindsay understand the different football formations.

Holly Shivner, Peter Chiu, Todd Holbrook and Trey McKinney enjoy the sunshine in Advanced P.E.

Activities

"Sniper!" At Fort Flagler, a group of senior guys take time to unwind and have fun.

A student at Auburn Academy can never get bored. There are always things going on that are fun, entertaining, and involve friends. Intramural sports, Off-campus ice skating, ASB parties, and, of course, the banquets. Extracurricular activities bond students and tie them together in friendship. "Auburn gives me a chance to be involved. All the activities are student-to-student instead of like classes, which are teacher-to-student," says senior Jeff Downs. You learn so much more about a person when you can talk to him or her outside of the humdrum of everyday school life. Various activities are just another way Auburn Academy provides a balanced social life for its students.

—Tara Vinyard

How long can you hold that? At the freshman class party, Kellie Booker shows a talent we never knew she had!

Heather Gately, Christal McCallum, Lisa Mundy, and Renee Raley take advantage of a rare opportunity to rest during the Sunset Lake outing.

Those freshmen have a lot of spirit. Sometimes freshmen are timid, but that is certainly not the case with this bunch.

Clad in an army costume at the ASB Fall Festival, Canaan Rice demonstrates his remarkable dancing skills.

Magic carpet ride? Sort of. Elizabeth Darroch floats on a sea of senior guys during the ASB Getting to Know You.

Dorm & Village

Patrick Phelps comments, "I love school so much, if I don't sit down, I'll faint."

When people first come to Auburn Adventist Academy they realize that the people here are separated into two groups: dorm and village. There are major pros and cons to both lifestyles. Many village students envy the social opportunities and organized schedules that dorm students have. While dorm students are jealous of the freedom that a village student's life style yields.

Dorm life at Auburn Academy has its ups and downs. Dorm life creates memories full of pranks and tears that will never be forgotten. It gives friends the opportunity to get to know each other in a way that village students sometimes envy. Dorm life isn't all fun though. Village students definitely have the advantage in some areas. For example, most village students don't have to fill out paper work to leave the house.

—Sarah Sharp

Tammie Bergeson studies on the couch in the lobby at Nelson Hall waiting for a chemistry man to come and save her.

"Those locker combinations can really get ya!" says Kristen Greiner.

Joi Roberts is excited about the upcoming weekend off.

Christy Dougherty studies in a trendy hangout for Auburn Academy students—the student lounge.

Work

Ben Crew leans over the steering wheel and asks "What's wrong with this contraption?"

Cleaning shower stalls and urinals, grading papers and mowing the lawn are only a few of the things we do to help pay off our school bill. Readers (a teacher's assistant) usually go crazy everyday grading papers, doing errands, cleaning classrooms, and sometimes even teaching! So do desk and office workers. They are busy answering phones, filing papers, and sorting through a lot of junk. You can see them everywhere! Maintenance also has a difficult job. They mow lawns, clean rooftops, fix what breaks down, and a lot more. "It's a great experience and you learn a lot from your job," says Ben Crew. Janitorial though has to be one of the most interesting jobs on campus. It may seem difficult going into the boys' bathroom to clean. Mindy Owen says, "All you have to do is say 'Anybody here, No, OK, and if anybody's here, I'm coming in,'" With all these jobs, we can't forget the Resident Assistants. Work is pretty much an all day thing. They clean halls, bathrooms and showers, keep the halls quiet, make sure that everyone is there in their own room at the right time, take check, and mounds upon mounds of other things.

—Rodney Baladad

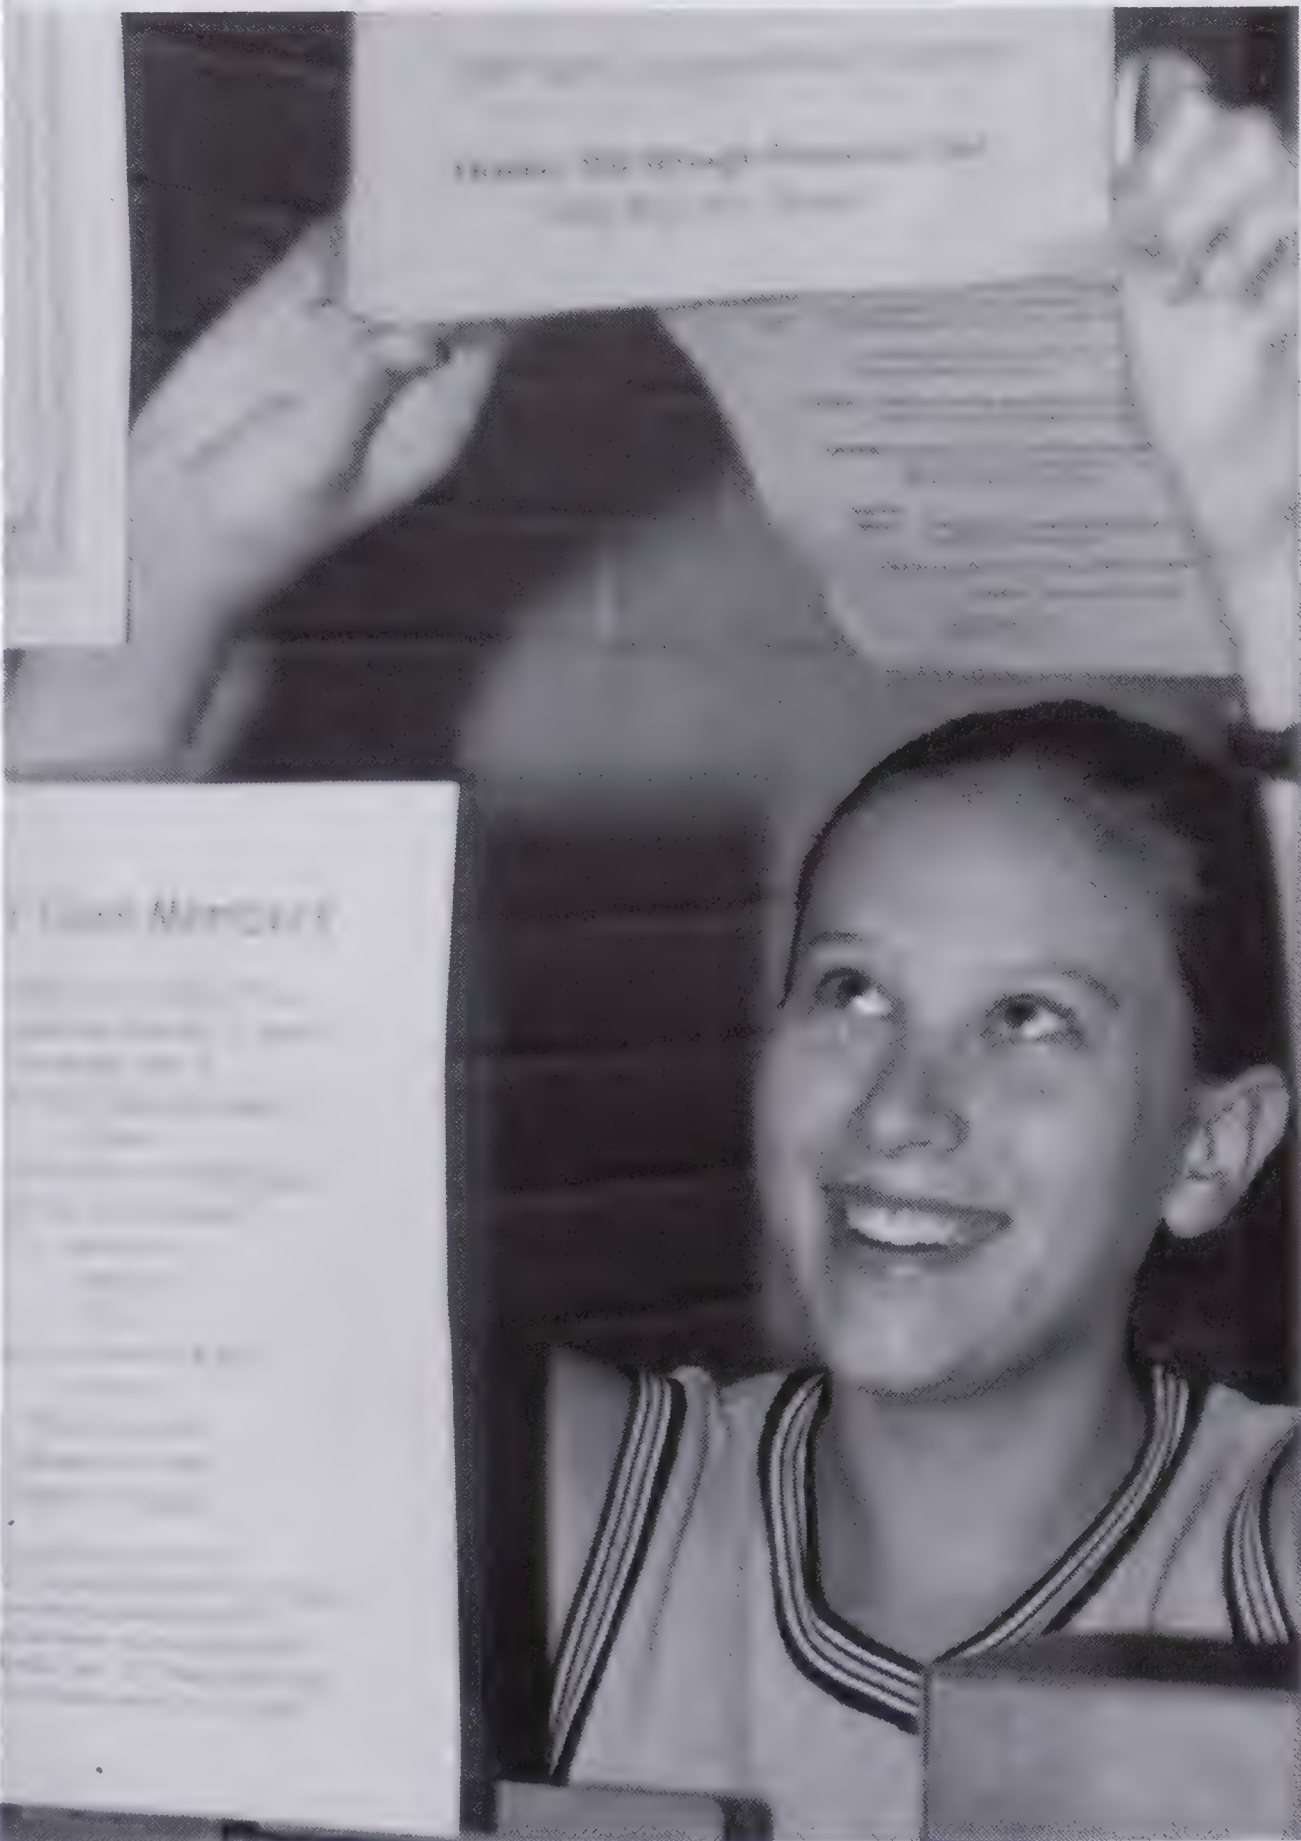

"Hello, Mrs. Z's office, can I help you?" asks Amber Serns.

Tim Owen smiles for a moment before returning to his attempt to open the paint bucket.

"Mrs. Pike is always on the phone," mutters Matthew Erbenich.

"Posting signs is so much fun," grins Sarah Sladek.

"Don't you dare take that picture," Daphanie Nelson says as Barbara Semakula poses for the shot.

"So much cord, What are we going to use this all for?" asks Chris Kellie.

Christmas

Three major events in the month of December keep the student body hopping.

Nelson Hall's Open House, on the 12th, usually attracts quite a crowd. Faculty, parents and guys are allowed to come check out the Christmas themes on each hall. Some of the girls' rooms were also displayed, but were off-limits to all but the occupant.

At 7:30 that same evening, voices and instruments had just been tuned for the Sacred Christmas Concert. All four music groups performed, including two piano solos by Adrienne Ritz and Sarah Muholland. Travis Allen thrilled the audience with a beautiful harp solo. All of the music seemed to bring a little bit of heaven down to earth.

The night of the 14th found most students with nervous knots in their stomachs as they prepared to meet their dates for the banquet. Decorations in the café and the evening's activities had a World War II theme. "It's the first banquet I ever took my wife to," Pastor Bill smiled, proving that faculty enjoyed the event as much as the students. One student didn't seem to have noticed anything but her date when she exclaimed, "My date was hot!" Karrina Meacham summed it all up by noting that, "Even the food tasted good because of the atmosphere."

—Janie Cox

Heather Becker looks a bit surprised as an inquisitive male opens her door during open house.

Steve Cochran and Esther Pflugrad don't look too sure about having guys roaming the halls of the girl's dorm.

Boy, Craig Winslow sure looks excited about being allowed in the girl's dorm, but Jason Neumann could use a little more enthusiasm.

Angie Collver and Ms. Parker discuss the possibilities of allowing guys access into the girl's dorm for open house.

Jennifer Marshall and Lindsay Venden seem to appreciate the prospect of being at the Christmas Banquet dateless. Erin Richards, however, doesn't look quite so ecstatic.

Valerie Black looks like she could be singing in an angel choir. Only, I don't think she can read the music as well as she seems to be able to . . .

Brooke Jordan, Lisa Mundy, Rebecca Serrano, Carol Gambs and Heather Phelps seem to feel sorry for Mr. Alvarez, who doesn't have a date.

Travis Allen is oblivious to the audience as he plucks the strings of his harp to produce heavenly music.

Angela Seo and Dacia Haning focus on the music in front of them as they play with nimble fingers.

Religious Activities

Christian Moore, And Humbert, Kimberly Penne and Amber Serns act out a song during the Sunset Lake Outing

It's a warm Saturday, and you just wish that you could go out and do something besides sitting around being bored. One of the things you might think about is participating during a church service. There are many options to choose from including leading out song service, offering prayer, being on a discussion panel and praising God with the congregation.

Saturday afternoons can sometimes arouse boredom. But even then you might want to participate in a Bible study or a prayer group. There are always people around who are truly excited about God and want to learn more about Him. Another thought is taking a short hike. The mountains are always a great place to view God's wonderful work in nature.

—Rodney Baladad

Jeni Whitlock, Gina Parker and Jennifer Christensen take a break from writing Thank-You notes during the Thanksgiving Vespers.

Jessie Jensen, Raun Kamakahi, Amber Serns and Kimberly Penner show how song service can be fun during Friday night Vespers.

Brian Hay and Craig Winslow wash each others feet during the communion vespers.

Chaplain Julie Hill tells the audience about her experiences during her last summer as a group leader for NYC.

Karisse Fiedler, Alex Humbert, Kirsten Lim and Jena Rowe enjoy Bible studies at Friday night Vespers.

Practical Christianity

When the week is over and you feel burned out, you can always come to Friday night vespers. Sabbath is a time to forget about the "D" on the chemistry final, and about your dad getting so upset about it; you can always come and find comfort in God. That is why God gave us the Sabbath. It is to be a day of rest and fulfillment. Vespers is a great time to have fun with your friends and sing and enjoy the fellowship that we relish as Christians here at Auburn Adventist Academy.

Sabbath afternoons can be spent in many different ways. Some people sleep in the dorm while others hike, or feed the homeless. Sabbath afternoon options can be a great time to socialize with your friends while becoming better acquainted with Jesus.

These options are excellent witnessing tools that make you feel proud to be a Christian helping others in God's name.

—Sarah Sharp

Josh Brunkhorst shares some of his experiences at Auburn Academy with the West Seattle Church.

Dustin Wolfson and Beau Cummings enjoy a sermon on the importance of being active in the church.

Jon Weigley and Jenni Whitlock enjoy a yummy potluck at the Seattle Westside Church.

John Lee plays Bible Pictionary with the Sabbath School at the West Seattle Church.

Sarah Lindsay and April Myers act out a skit about Northwest Youth Challenge during the Celebration of Youth Seminar.

Angela Chen and Karrina Meacham enjoy a nice cup of hot chocolate with a young member of the West Seattle Church.

Outreach

Brooke Jordan screams when her hyperactive children arrive for tutoring.

Every Tuesday evening students leave in vans and busses to take part in community service projects. This gives them the opportunity to experience being a witness for God, and to represent our church and our school. It offers dorm students the opportunity to get off campus and have fun and socialize with friends.

Options aren't always all fun and games. The tutors and Pathfinder counselors have to learn to be patient enough to show a little bit of Jesus and to teach younger kids honors and help in academics. Students going to nursing homes see the elderly at less than their prime, and occasionally they lose someone they have grown attached to. Although their hard work pays off with a warm fuzzy feeling and the opportunity to touch someone's heart.

—Sarah Sharp

Patrick McCormick and Kyle Olson and a friend enjoy each other's company.

Aaron Butler smiles at the chance to visit with a friend during Pathfinders.

Marie Butler and Laura Seibold visit with a friend at the nursing home.

Janelle Lacey helps out a young student during a Tuesday night tutoring option.

Sports

Auburn Adventist Academy offers a wide variety of sports to compete in if you choose. We have a Varsity and Junior Varsity team in football, basketball and volleyball. If you're not the best player, or just enjoy sports, you can also compete in intramurals that run throughout the year. Some of the activities that you can choose to participate in are badminton, tennis, softball and soccer.

Also, every year, the school holds two annual events. They are the swim meet, and track & field day. All in all, there are a lot of sports that you can participate in here at Auburn.

—Daniel Klineburger

Tim Hill comes in for the kill as Mr. Hallam and Mr. Fackenthall reach for the ball.

Sarah Bailey somehow manages to get hold of Tamara Tolf's pants in the heat of a football game.

As Lindsey Barker and William Choi fight for the ball, Matt Parker moves in for the steal.

Valerie Black surges through the water during the ladies freestyle swimming race.

Jae-Hoon Hong looks on in awe as Jae-Chan Kim executes a perfect set in the volleyball game.

Football

The skill of Auburn Academy students was evident during this year's football season. Both male and female students and faculty enjoyed the friendly competition of intramurals four nights a week. "It was fun and it gave something positive to participate in!" exclaims Carolyn Gambs.

Our Boys Varsity team dominated the "Friendship Tournament" at Walla Walla this year. As Matthew Lee said, "My favorite thing about football was bonding . . . with my teammates."

Overall, the football season was enjoyed by everyone. Tim Hill sums it up by saying, "It's football. What more can I say???"

Swimming

Here at Auburn, we are fortunate enough to have our own pool. Two of the classes that are taught here are swimming and lifeguard training. You can take these classes to get P.E. credit, or brush up on your swimming. As Christal McCallum says, "Swimming is a good way to stay in shape here at Auburn." Scuba diving, which can be a great experience, is another option available to students. Most people who have gone diving think that it's wonderful. "We were on a dive and thought that we were down about 40-50 feet," Aaron Butler said. "It ended up...that we were down about sixty feet."

This year we had an awesome swim meet. As the races unfolded, the Seniors were ahead on the first night. Then, the Sophomores took the lead Tuesday night. Finally, on Wednesday, the Seniors regained the lead, and won the swim meet.

—Daniel Klineburger

Volleyball

If this year's volleyball team can be described using one word it would be "spirit." All the girls on the team tried their best and didn't give up. Mandi Leno, the team's manager, says, "This year's team is very optimistic and bonded through the new program. I really enjoyed working with them." At the beginning of the year, the team went to Pacific Union College for a tournament, and even though they didn't come in first, they never got upset or discouraged. Mrs. Kobberstad was the girls' coach this year and Adrienne Ritz said that she "put in a lot of energy and spirit into the team this year." Another thing that was unique about the volleyball team this past year was the fact that they all got along so well with each other. In volleyball especially, it is important to communicate with your players. You need to let each other know where you are and what you are doing. This can be hard to do if the players don't know or like each other. When you watched the girls play you could see a distinct unity to the group that set them apart from so many other teams. Even though the volleyball team didn't win any gold medals, they showed excellent sportsmanship and grew together as a team, which is, in many ways, more important than winning.

—Lauren Edwards

Jae-Hoon Hong looks intently at the volleyball as he gets ready to serve it over the net.

Marie Butler makes an effort to bump the volleyball during an intramural game.

Jeff Downs gets ready to put the volleyball over the net, but Justin Shipowick is ready for it...

The girls' varsity team pump each other up in a group huddle.

Angela Seo, Felicia Yon, Brittany Freeden, and Karisse Fiedler are all alert and ready at the volleyball tournament at PUC.

Skiing & Snowboarding

Auburn Academy has a lot to offer if you are into skiing or snowboarding. Every Sunday there is a special program where a group of students go up to Snowqualmie. Bob Willison and Ulli Tutsch are the sponsors for the trip. The day starts at 10:00AM and ends around 6:00PM, but for the more adventurous people, there is an assistant/instructor program. These people are up at 7:00AM and leave the mountain at 6:30PM. Last year, for the first time, Peter Fackenthall organized a trip to Blackcomb in Canada. It turned out to be so much fun that he planned one for the '97-'98 year also. Students hope that it will continue to be an annual event. Mandi Leno, who went on the experimental Blackcomb adventure said, "The mountain was so gorgeous, and I liked going to the recreational center each evening."

The skiing and snowboarding program at Auburn has something for everyone.

Brian Jarnes is a master seamster, ask him to model the bikini he and Eric Winn sewed out of scrap towels.

Kelly Evans, Meghann Delaplaine and Lindsay Kirk watch the festivities during the ASB Costume Party.

Terry Cadwallader, Sarah Sharp, Maleia Tracy and Michael Chinn prepare for a night at the banquet.

Lisa Mundy and Channa Kuhns enjoy a friendly wrestling match in the hall of the Ad Building.

Brittany Richards and Lindsey Venden wait to fill out their work forms.

Dale Hyde helps Travis Allen fix the Music Building's door.

Kimberly Wright asks her sister, Jennifer Wright, if her food is moving.

Adam Gullion waits for a "friendly" chat with Dean Bale.

Senior Recognition

Beau Cummings looks like on proud guy with the lovely Ceri Myers at his side as they march up to the stage.

Senior Recognition is a night of stress, nervousness and recognition of the seniors and their accomplishments. Excitement mounts as everyone arrives at the church, checking and re-checking the time, where they (the seniors) are supposed to be and when. Tension mounts when all of the seniors begin to line up and find their places.

After marching up onto the stage, the settling down is easier. Only those performing or taking part in the program remain nervous. All of the music sounds so beautiful and the speaker seems energetic and inspiring. A few of the seniors fidget in their seats as they wait for the program to end. With their final march down the center aisle, relief creeps over each senior as they realize half the year has already been experienced.

—Janie Cox

Christy Weigley receives the privilege of introducing the speaker, Elder Bill Miller, who seems to be chuckling to himself.

Tim Dunston, Joel Mickelwait, Stefan Kaiser and Jeff Downs, the Senior Mens' Quartet, perform in a resounding capella.

Tim Dunston reverently bows his head as he prepares to give the invocation.

Joel Mickelwait and Adrienne Ritz accompany Janie Cox for an electrifying performance of Thank You, the class song.

Jae-Hoon Hong and Bobby Chun solemnly exit the sanctuary after the evening's program was completed.

Vladimir Temchuk, Danny Hernandez and Eric Winslow don't appear a bit fazed by the adult status Senior Recognition symbolizes.

Heather Jarnes and Ted Swinyar recognize the four-year seniors.

Salena Reber and Melissa Mundy play a beautiful duet arrangement of O God Our Hope in Ages Past.

"Next time I'm goin' for the other ear!" screams an enthusiastic Mike "Luke Loeffler" Tyson as he is restrained by Don "Micael Serrano" King.

Living in the boys' dorm for four years can be . . . well . . . interesting.

Bryan
Bailey
enthralled
the audience during Senior
Recognition with his tales from the dorm.

Wielding a big mouth
and a lot of courage,

Ross Von Pohle leads the Seniors to victory during the ASB Getting to Know You.
